1º TRIMESTRE – ATIVIDADES DE LÍNGUA INGLESA

ENCONTRO VIRTUAL 1- SEMANA DE 30 DE MARÇO A 03 DE ABRIL

Hi, Folks!!

Wishing you a great week!

Algumas instruções que deverão ser seguidas:

- Você precisará usar seu livro. Caso você não o tenha em casa, poderá acessar o site : www.richmond.com.br/portal e acessar seu livro em forma digital. Caso não esteja com o livro nem tenha se registrado no portal ( para isso você precisou usar o código na página azul no início de seu livro), vou anexar aqui mesmo uma cópia em pdf das páginas para você.
- Faça as atividades enviadas tão logo as receba, isso evitará acúmulos que, inevitavelmente, geram ansiedade.
- Separe um horário do seu dia para estudar. Não faça as tarefas pela metade ou as distribua pelo seu dia inteiro! Isso vai deixar você com a sensação de sobrecarga.

Lots of love, Renata

A partir se segunda-feira dia 06 de abril, nosso material será enviado via plataforma Moderna
 Compartilha. Lá, você terá livre acesso ao livro digital. Portanto, só enviarei os gabaritos digitalizados e não mais a digitalização de páginas para fazermos os exercícios

Agora, sua atividade:

Correção – Gabarito dos exercícios das páginas 29 e 30 do livro Access 1

- Read the title of the blog post below and analyze the image. In your opinion, what does the "quality of 1 keeping people together" involve? Read the text and find out if any of your ideas were mentioned in it.

Do You Have the "Quality of Keeping People Together"?

Assay: Recently, when I was rereading Gertrude Stein's The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas, I was very struck by this observation about the French poet Guillaume Apollinaire:

"The death of Guillaume Apollinaire at this time made a very serious difference to all his friends apart from their sorrow at his death. It was the moment just after the war when many things had changed 5 and people naturally fell apart. Guillaume would have been a bond of union, he always had a quality of keeping people together, and now that he was gone everybody ceased to be friends."

The "quality of keeping people together" seems an important and rare attribute, and although it doesn't come naturally to me, I'm trying to do a better job of it myself, and also to appreciate more the work of the Apollinaire-ish types whose efforts benefit me.

- 10 This quality has been on my mind since the sad occasion of a memorial service of a friend. I knew her in a work context, but at the service, I realized from the tributes of her college friends that, along with many other wonderful traits, she had the "quality of keeping people together" from that time.
  - My sister is this way, too, and from watching her in action, I know how much energy and time it takes to act like glue, to make the efforts that allow people to stay close.
- 15 Who coaxes people into showing up to the reunion? Who remembers everyone's birthdays, and insists that everyone get together to mark the occasion? Who plans the promotion celebration? Who organizes the group wedding gift? Who keeps track of everyone's addresses? Who sends out the group emails? It doesn't sound very hard - until you're the one doing it. And although it's a lot of work, it's all too easy for people to take these efforts for granted, or not to realize how important one person is to the strength of a particular web of relationships. In fact, that person might well be teased for these efforts,
- 20 and instead of people being appreciative and cooperative, they might act jaded and superior to such gung-ho antics. Ancient philosophers and contemporary scientists agree: one of the keys - perhaps the key - to happiness is strong relationships, and the often unsung work of such folks to keep up a "bond of union" makes a tremendous difference to everyone in their circles. How about you? Do you have the "quality of keeping people together"? Do you feel that your efforts are appreciated? If you don't naturally play this role, have you found strategies to work at it?

Camp teaches girls the ropes on manipulative advertising

A very cool thing is happening this week at a summer camp in Charlotte, N.C., where 5th and 6th grade girls gather to learn "social leadership" skills.

"We talk about how to be a leader in your social space," says educator and author Michelle lcard, who founded Athena's Path camp a decade ago. "Since middle school throws so 5 many curveballs at kids, we identify leadership moments and how to handle them." lcard kicked off camp Monday by tackling advertising: a two-headed beast that tries to strip girls of their confidence and then lunges for their cash.

It's tough to be a leader when you're broke and panicked about your thighs.

"We talk about the fact that ads cost a ton of money to make, and if you're only going 10 to look at one for three seconds, advertisers need to have some tricks up their sleeve," Icard told me. "Then I pull out my stack of ads."

Print ads, mostly, which lcard has collected from various magazines and the Gender Ads Project, a website that collects and dissects the messages behind advertising images.

"We discuss normalization, when an advertiser tells a girl something is not normal about 15 her - bad skin, fat thighs -, but suggests their product will fix it," Icard says. "We talk about how advertisers target the fear that your body isn't normal, especially girls their age because their bodies are changing so rapidly."

She reminds the girls that advertisers want their time and attention because they've got baby-sitting money, birthday money, allowance and other income that's not earmarked for 20 grown-up stuff like mortgages and groceries and utility bills.

She sends them on a scavenger hunt of sorts, tasking them with finding examples of girls and women being portrayed as objects or made to appear weak and imperiled. "Each of the tricks is really supporting the main message advertisers send to girls, which is that being helpless is attractive," she says. "We talk through fairy tales, and how girls are 25 raised to believe that helpless girls are attractive to boys. We talk about how in middle school girls start acting dumb to get boys' attention. Then we look at ads and ask for each one: Does she look happy? Does she look healthy? Does she look like she's in a position of power?" I've got to believe this lesson changes the way the girls approach not just ads, but relationships as well - with siblings, with friends, with boys. "What I want them to do is [to] think critically about what they're being told," Icard says. "And to know that they've got the power and now they've got the knowledge. And they can use both of those things when they're making decisions."

30 And becoming leaders.

What every young girl should know

According to the text, Icard defines "advertising" as

- a something you only need three seconds to look at, which means that advertisers need to have some tricks up their sleeve.
- b a monster that intends to destroy girls' self-confidence and make them spend money.
- c obstacles that are posed to middle school kids.
- d a topic that 5th and 6th grade girls should learn about, just like "social leadership" skills.
- e something that makes girls waste money and look better.
- In the sentence "We talk about the fact that ads cost a ton of money to make, and if you're only going to look at one for three seconds, advertisers need to have some tricks up their sleeve" (lines 9-10), what "tricks" is Icard referring to?
  - 1 Convincing girls that something about them isn't normal just to sell a product that will solve their problem.
  - 2 Using fairy tales to convince girls that boys find them more attractive as princesses.
  - 3 Targeting girls, who don't usually use their money to pay expensive bills.
  - 4 Making girls appear fragile and at risk.

Mark the option that corresponds to the correct statements.

a 1 and 2.

b 2, 3, and 4.

c 1 and 3.

d 1, 3, and 4.

DEVELOPING VOCABULARY

DHD 4 SES COMMON! VILSED IN SPOKEN I ANGIIAGE

- Read the following extracts from the text on pages 22-23. Analyze the highlighted phrases and answer the questions.
  - "That's because people respond to ads when 'they get it'." (lines 31-33)
  - "Studies show that about 15% of people will find something unacceptable in any ad, no matter what it shows." (lines 38-
  - "Let's say you are the owner of a technology company and you want to sell more products in Asia." (lines 44-46
  - "Here it comes: in our highly technological world, communication is personal, and so is ethics." (lines 61-65)

Which phrase

- 1 could be replaced by "whatever"?
- 2 introduces a speculation or hypothetical situation?
- 3 indicates that the speaker is about to say something?
- 4 is an informal way to say "people understand it"?

ADVERBS OF MANNER

Adverbs are words used to modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs, which are categorized according to what they express as adverbs of manner, of time, of frequency, etc.

Adverbs of manner describe how something happens:

"That's also why advertisers take casting so seriously."

They are usually formed by adding -ly to an adjective:

careful > carefully; quiet > quietly; rude > rudely; sudden > suddenly

But there are some exceptions:

fast > fast; good > well; hard > hard

Adverbs of manner are usually placed after the main verb:

They tried hard to write a good ad.

However, if the verb has an object, the adverb of manner is usually placed after the object:

I listened to the jingle carefully.

I listened carefully to the jingle.

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

Reflexive pronouns are words used to	Subject Pronouns	Reflexive Pronouns refer back to the subject of a sentence. They are used when the subject of the sentence is also the receiver of the action. They end in -self	1	myself
	you	yourself
	he	himself
	she	herself
	it	itself
	we	ourselves
(singular) or -selves	you	yourselves
(plural).	they	themselves

Walter sent himself a copy of the market research so he could work from home. (singular subject = Walter)

The copywriter and the art director couldn't deal with the agency's bills themselves, so they hired an accountant. (plural subject = the copywriter and the art director)

Reflexive pronouns can also be used for emphasis. In this case, they are not necessary, but when added, they intensify the role of the subject in an action: I wrote the ad myself!

When we use verbs that describe things people usually do for themselves (such as dress, shave, and wash), reflexive pronouns are not necessary:

Mark had to shave every day when he worked as a model.

5 The text below discusses the concept of "referencing". Read it and do the activities.

We Reference What We Desire

Have you ever noticed that TV shows frequently depict average people living a better lifestyle than they can afford without any financial concerns? And then we see advertisements that motivate us to have the lifestyle we've previously seen in our favorite shows.

- 5 This marketing strategy is called referencing.
  - We reference (sometimes deliberately, but not always) to lifestyles we feel attracted to. We idealize a certain lifestyle and behave accordingly, so as to realize this ideal. The problem is that this idealized lifestyle is usually far from what most people can afford. As a consequence,
- 10 in order to realize our aspirations, we end up borrowing heavily and feeling poorly about ourselves, because we may try hard to live up to the standards of our ideals and do not succeed. Also, we are likely to lose sight of the things in life that bring us the most joy, as we focus on a way of living that gradually and brutally separates us from them

- 2 Which adverb of manner from the text could be replaced by
  - a badly? ___
  - b intentionally? _
  - c progressively?
  - d cruelly? ____
  - e massively? _
  - f correspondingly?_
- 3 Find one example of a reflexive
- pronoun in the text and circle it.
- What subject does the reflexive pronoun you circled refer to?

- Identify the mistake in these sentences. Then rewrite them correctly.
  - 1 You guys did a great job! You should be proud of yourself.

2 She should dress herself more carefully. She dresses too casually for a marketing director.

3 The designers taught their selves to use the new software.

4 I can play the piano very good. I want to be a professional musician one day.

LANGUAGE PRACTICE II

Modal Verbs

A modal verb is a type of auxiliary verb that gives extra information about the main verb. It can express different meanings, such as:

Advice: should (not); ought (not) to

You should/ought to be on the lookout for manipulative ads.

She shouldn't/ought not to believe in everything she sees in advertising.

Should I go to that marketing conference?

Strong advice: had better (not)

You had better stop lying when creating ads. You had better not lie when creating ads.

Ought to and had better are rarely used in the interrogative form.

Obligation: must: have to

We must talk to our kids about manipulative advertising.

Do I have to buy the whole package to get a discount?

Must refers to an obligation that one can impose on oneself or on other people; have to expresses external obligations, as rules that don't come from the speaker.

Lack of obligation: don't/doesn't have to

We don't have to create a jingle for the new campaign.

She doesn't have to buy the whole package to get a discount.

Prohibition: mustn't (must not); can't

You mustn't hand in your marketing plan after the deadline.

You can't forget to send the brief of the new campaign to the art director.

Analyze the following ad. According to it,

- 1 you must buy one pizza in order to get another one for free.
- 2 you don't have to order two pizzas on Wednesdays.
- 3 to use the discount, you don't have to collect the pizzas you buy.
- to use the discount, you must order pizzas on the weekend.

Mark the option which contains the correct statements.

- 1 and 2.
- 3 and 4.

- 2, 3, and 4.
- d 1, 2, and 3. e All of them.

Underline the correct option to complete the sentences. Then match each sentence to what it expresses.

- 1 Believe me, if you're claiming something in your ad, you had better / don't have to have some research data to back it up.
- I hate the fact that some advertisements try to persuade teenagers to do things they ought to / mustn't do, like drink or drive.
- 3 At this point, our product needs a temporary name. It should / doesn't have to be perfect, because we can change it later.
- 4 Ads for medical drugs can't / ought not to be misleading in any way.
- The law stipulates that all price claims made in an ad had better / have to correspond to the final price customers pay at the store.
- A good slogan should recall the trademark name, which preferably doesn't have to / ought to be included in it.
- 7 New products should / had better not be expensive to avoid getting stuck on store shelves.

advice:	6
strong advice:	1, 7
obligation:	5
lack of obligation:	3
prohibition:	2, 4

3 Mentify the mistakes in these sentences. Then rewrite them correctly.

- 1 There's too much advertising around us, so you should to ignore ads that are not targeted at you.
- 2 There are some rules that we mustn't to break when preparing an advertising campaign.
- 3 Don't get discouraged. You ought not focus on the negative side of things.

DEVELOPING ACCURACY

As a rule, modal verbs are always followed by the base form of the main verb. Since the particle "to" in ought to is not an indication of the infinitive form of the main verb, it should be maintained.

4 Mark the correct modal verbs to complete the text about the influence of advertising on people's spending habits. In some cases, there might be more than one possible answer.

How Manipulative Advertising Works

(and What to Do about It)

Advertising aims at telling you about a product. It can be as simple as "Brand X laundry detergent cleans your clothes" or "Supermarket Y sells food". In a competitive market, the ads we see (1) ________ be more detailed so that they can differentiate their products from others. For instance, a restaurant may serve a good-tasting, unhealthy burger in less than a minute, but why (2) _______ you choose theirs amongst all the others? Because they told you to.

5 If you're not ready to think – which is often the case when you're watching TV or reading a magazine –, you'll probably accept any suggestion they are offering you. You may not even realize it's happening because you're being too passive.

What (3) _______ you do? Use your brain. When you used to hear from your parents "because I said so," you were not likely to accept that answer. You (4) _______ do it subconsciously when watching an ad either; instead, you (5) _______ think about what the ad is saying and consider the unfavorable aspects of the products that aren't being shown to you. It doesn't take that long to realize that the chalupa being advertised may or may not contain real meat. You (6) _______ use your brain when you're watching or looking at ads!
